POLS 250 Comparative Politics, Spring 2024
Class hours: W 9:40 – 12:30; MDBF L058
Instructor: Ersin Kalaycıoğlu (FASS 1048)
Office hours (W 13:30 – 14:30 or by appointment)

Comparative politics is one of the six fundamental fields of political science, which studies political institutions, values, belief, and attitudes that comprise political culture, political processes and affairs of different political regimes, the development of the political self, and political behavior of individuals, groups, organizations, and the state in our world. Comparative politics focuses on the development and sustenance of state, different types of authoritarian, totalitarian, and democratic regimes states possess, and the characteristics of authority, legitimacy, and obedience to political rule across different regimes. Comparative politics also deals with questions on the political economy of change, governance, power struggles of interest groups that deeply influence the distribution of wealth and resources, and the politics of policymaking.

This course is designed to serve the following purposes: (1) To teach students to think about political systems in comparative terms; (2) to enable students to develop a more sophisticated understanding of their own political system vis-à-vis the others; (3) to help students comprehend the political developments, institutions, and processes that occur in political systems other than their own; and (4) to analyze how major human concerns with freedom, social justice, human rights, democracy, etc., take shape and influence the emergence and structure of political institutions, processes, and practices in different polities.

Requirements for the course include one midterm and one final examination. The former (midterm) will be administered on April 3, 2024 Wednesday at 9:40 a.m. and the latter (final) will be administered socially in class on May 29, 2024 Wednesday. Class attendance and meaningful participation will be measured by means of the pop-quizzes that will be given throughout the term. Lectures will be administered physically in class and synchronously if necessary.

Course grades will be determined as follows:

Participation	: 20%
Midterm Exam	: 35%
Final Exam	: 45%

There is a book assigned for this course and it is: Daniele Caramani (ed.) Comparative Politics (Fifth Ed.), (New York, N. Y: Oxford University Press, 2020).
