Course Description

This course aims to familiarize students with the field of moral philosophy, with both the cornerstones in its history and certain pressing debates today. It is organized in two parts. The first part provides a background in traditional approaches. It examines virtue ethics, deontology, and consequentialism, as well as a criticism of traditional moral philosophy. With that background, the second part then focuses on key contemporary discussions in moral philosophy. It addresses issues such as human enhancement, animal rights, deep ecology, and global justice, among others. In both parts, the reading are selected from the main names in the areas.

Course Requirements and Grading

Grading:

Attendance: %10

In-class Quizzes: %15

Group Presentations: %10

Midterm: %30

Final: %35

Attendance:

The course will be held in a hybrid format. Students will be able to attend the course both in class and via Zoom. Students who join via Zoom are expected to keep their cameras on and microphones off during class. If you are joining via Zoom and would like to speak, please say so in the chatbox on Zoom which I will check regularly. This will be the equivalent of raising your hand in the classroom.

Attendance will be taken on an hourly basis. Attendance follow-up starts at the end of the add-drop period. After 2 unexcused hours your attendance grade will fall by 1 point with every unexcused absence. (That is to say, with 3 unexcused absences you get a 9/10, with 4 you get 8/10, etc.) Students who miss 9 hours of class in total will receive a “0” for their attendance grade.

Absences for medical reasons are to be documented with a doctor’s report, and acceptance of medical reports are due to instructor approval.

An absence may also count as excused in case a life situation that you need to attend arises: in such cases please email me beforehand, if possible.

In order to take a make up exam, the medical report must be submitted within 3 days after the original exam date.

Important health measures for face-to-face instruction: Everybody in the classroom is required to properly wear a mask, covering their mouth and noses, during the entire face-to-face sessions. Windows will remain open during these sessions, unless the weather makes it impossible.

Participation in class:

Thoughtful and meaningful participation in class is highly encouraged. Outstanding contribution to the class and proof of engagement with the course material beyond course requirements may bring your final course grade up by half a letter (thus bringing it up from a B- to a B, for example), at the instructor’s discretion.

In-class Quizzes:

There will be unannounced quizzes during class time. There will be no make ups for missed quizzes. If a student is absent on the day we have a quiz but they have emailed me before class to let me know about their excuse, that quiz will not be included in their quiz average. Anyone who is absent without an excuse will automatically get a zero on that quiz. At the end of the semester everyone’s lowest quiz grade will be dropped.

Group Presentations:

We will have group presentations in the last weeks of class. During the semester the students will form presentation groups and decide on the topics they want to present on. (I encourage you to talk to me as soon as you begin thinking about a topic. We can even brainstorm about it in class, about how to treat it as an issue in moral philosophy, and everyone can benefit.) The students are to then to submit a one-page outline of their research with their topic and group members’ names by week 9. Each group will have around half an hour to present and lead discussion on their topic. Everyone in the group is expected to contribute to both the preparation and the presentation stages.

Midterm and Final Exams:

Midterm and Final exams will be held face to face, in the classroom.
