"The whole of science is nothing more than the refinement of everyday thinking."

Albert Einstein

The objective of this course is to equip students with a broad understanding of the fundamentals of economics. Econ 204 focuses on behavior of individual units, such as consumers, producers and governments, centered around solving economic problem. These include preferences of individuals, technologies available to firms, structure of the markets and policies of the government. The course provides necessary tools to systematically analyze decisions made by the agents and their consequences.

The course meets for three lectures and a discussion session per week. Students must attend all classes and discussion sessions they have been assigned to.

The rules of the class is as follows: Your work on exams is to be entirely your own. Your instructor takes "Academic Honesty" most seriously. Be sure you are familiar with the University Academic Regulations and the Regulations for Student Disciplinary Matters. Cheating, plagiarism, and collusion are serious offenses resulting in an F grade and disciplinary action.
