Fall 2022

Oya Yeğen oya.yegen@sabanciuniv.edu	Office hours: W 09:00-11:00 FASS 2116
Class schedule: W 14:40-16:30 & F 9:40-10:30 G049 & 1097	https://calendly.com/oyayegen/officehours

Course Description: The idea of human rights has permeated many aspects of domestic and international politics but human rights violations and abuses are frequent and flagrant. This course introduces students to the foundations of human rights theory and practice and examines the role of human rights in world affairs. The course analyzes what constitutes as human rights and offers a critical analysis of international human rights norms and its enforcement by focusing on major international institutions and the documents that govern the human rights regime as well as the role of states, individuals, NGOs and other human rights networks. We begin with an overview of the conceptual and historical origin of human rights, followed by a discussion on the challenges to human rights: sovereignty and cultural relativism. We review the role of international law in the emergence, development and enforcement of human rights. Supported by discussion of real-world cases, both historical and contemporary, the course surveys the role of the state as promoter and violator of human rights, the role of human rights in foreign policy and critically reviews application of human rights by exploring the judicial and political enforcement mechanisms, the dilemma of humanitarian intervention, and the effectiveness of different forms of human rights advocacy. We conclude the course by exploring the future of human rights.

A typical lecture begins with the presentation of the topic and is followed by class discussion on readings and relevant discussion questions and requires the active participation of students.

Learning Outcomes:

- 1) Understand the development of the concept of human rights and discuss the various critiques of this concept.
- 2) Define and identify human rights and critically evaluate their implementation in world affairs.
- 3) Identify the relevant the international human rights treaties and understand how the human rights regime works.
- 4) Analyze and understand the strengths and weaknesses of mechanisms to promote and protect human rights by individuals, non-governmental organizations, states, and international organizations and others.
- 5) Critically think about different human rights problems in different countries by focusing on case studies.
- 6) Apply theoretical knowledge and develop writing and communication skills.
- 7) Critique readings, analyze evidence and make informed arguments (G).

Course Requirements:

Throughout the course, the main expectation is that the students come to class ready to discuss the readings and comment on the lecture.

Readings are available on SuCourse +. Those marked by (G) are required readings for graduate students but undergraduates should familiarize themselves with their main arguments.

Additionally, students are expected to follow the current developments relevant to human rights, as we will devote the first 15 minutes of each class to discuss what is happening and how it relates to general theoretical debates.

I encourage you to keep yourself updated about current developments by following reputable newspapers such as those of the New York Times, The Guardian, Washington Post or news agencies such as BBC News, CNN, Al-Jazeera, Reuters and etc. You may keep yourself updated by following related websites and blogs such HRW (<https://action.hrw.org/>), AI (<https://www.amnesty.org/en/>), LSE Human Rights (<https://blogs.lse.ac.uk/humanrights/>) and David Bosco's blog the Multilateralist (<https://davidbosco.substack.com/archive>) as well as the Rights Track podcast (<http://rightstrack.org>). I encourage you to share what you have read, with your comments on Sucourse+.

Additional short readings (such as newspaper articles and blog posts) may be assigned over the course of the semester.

Undergraduates	Graduates
20 % attendance and participation	20% attendance and participation
20% midterm exam	20% response papers
30% reflection papers	30% book review
30% final exam	30% take home exams

Course Assessment:

Midterm Exam (20%): There will be an in-class midterm exam. The midterm will include identification and short essay questions. For graduate students, the format will be take-home (15%).

Attendance and Participation (20%): You will be evaluated on contributions to class discussions, both in terms of quality and quantity. Sucourse + will also provide a venue for participation through discussion forums. There will be an ungraded assignment (human rights bio due Week 2) that will still count towards your participation. See course policies for further details.

Reflection papers (15%): Undergraduate students will be writing two reflections on a current event that falls within the broader topic of human rights. Please feel free to consult me before deciding on your topic.

Response papers (10%): Graduate students will be writing two written responses of approximately 2 -3 pages in reaction to a week's readings material. The first response paper can be for any week between 4 and 8 and second one for any week between 9 and 13. Each student will be responsible for discussing the assigned reading during class hour.

Book review (30%): Graduate students are required to write a book review for one of the books listed below. Further instructions will be posted on Sucourse+

Final Exam (30%): There will be an essay type in-class final exam. The date is to be announced Student Resources. Students who fail to show up for the exams indicated in the Syllabus without a valid excuse and not taking the make-up examinations for such exams will receive N/A as their final grade. For graduate students, the format will be take-home (15%).

Grading Scale:

Course Policies:

Attendance is mandatory and unless you have a valid excuse, absences will result in point deductions from participation grade. Having said that, if you have a foreseeable valid reason for absences, you should tell me at the beginning of the semester so that we can find alternative ways to make up for it.

During class lectures and discussions, please turn off your cellphones, be respectful to your fellow classmates and do not interrupt one another when speaking.

While we prefer and require participation during class hours, you can make up by engaging with the discussion online by responding to questions posted or by posing your own questions in the SUcourse+ course discussion forum.

There is not going to be an extension unless a student has a written official documentation of an emergency (i.e. medical notice from a doctor documenting your illness). Please let me know of any excused absences.

It is imperative that students follow the standards and provisions set by Sabancı University. Students' cheating, plagiarism and other academic offences will not be tolerated. Cases of academic misconduct will be reported. Cheating and plagiarism will also result in failing that exam/assessment. If you have any questions about what constitutes an academic offense, you can ask the instructor or TA in advance.

I will keep you updated about the course, including additional short readings through e-mail and communicate any changes to the syllabus or deadlines through Sucourse+ announcement board.

Please always feel free to e-mail me at any time or talk to me during class breaks or after class. If you have a matter that requires extended discussion, please see me during my office hours or arrange to meet me at a convenient time. I will do my best to respond to your emails within 24 hours.
